

Quiet Tribune

VOL. 1, NO. 010

2026-03-30

COVER STORY

How to redeem your Emirates Skywards miles for partner-operated flights right now

class="rssBody">

If you've been building up a stash of Emirates Skywards miles for a long-haul flight to Dubai, you might be wondering what to do with them right now.

Ben Smithson · The Points Guy

lass="rssBody">
C

If you've been building up a stash of Emirates Skywards miles for a long-haul flight to Dubai, you might be wondering what to do with them right now.

With the U. S. Department of State issuing a Level 3 "Reconsider Travel" advisory for the United Arab Emirates due to the current conflict in Iran, Emirates is operating a severely reduced schedule. As a result, airspace across the Middle East is intermittently restricted, and booking an Emirates flight to or through Dubai International Airport (DXB) isn't a realistic option for most travelers at the moment.

But you don't need to fly Emirates or travel to or through the Middle East to get great value from those Skywards miles. Emirates has partnerships with more than a dozen individual airlines and just overhauled its partner award chart, slashing the cost of some partner redemptions.

Here's everything you need to know and what you can book now.

Related: What to do if your flight from — or through — the Middle East is affected

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

Emirates is not a member of any of the three major airline alliances and instead maintains individual partnerships with a carefully curated (and admittedly eclectic) roster of airlines.

As of March, the following partner airlines are using Emirates' new distance-based award chart:

TAP Air Portugal

EMIRATES

Related: TAP Air Portugal unveils a 'neighbor-free seat' booking option in economy

Several other partners have not yet transitioned to the new chart and still price awards using the older (and generally more expensive) rates:

Meanwhile, Qantas has its own dedicated Skywards award chart, which also received a significant overhaul on the same date.

You can view any of these award charts by selecting the individual partner airline here, scrolling down to select "important information" and then looking beneath the displayed earning chart(s).

Additional airline partners EasyJet and Jet2.com don't use a fixed award chart; instead, you can usually obtain around 0.6 to 0.7 cents per Skywards mile off the cost of cash fares on these airlines.

Skywards doesn't publish an awards chart for flights operated by FlyDubai, but these start from 5,000 Skywards miles for a short hop like DXB to Hamad International Airport (DOH) in Doha.

HORACIO VILLALOBOS CORBIS/CORBIS/GETTY IMAGES

The new partner award chart is distance-based, so your mileage cost depends on how far you fly, not which route you take. Short-haul flights under 300 miles are just 3,000 Skywards miles each way in economy or 7,500 miles in business class, making them some of the cheapest award flights in any loyalty program .

Here are some great options to consider:

Greek island hops from just 3,000 miles : Some of the best Greek islands are the lesser-known ones that only receive domestic flights (try Paros or Naxos). Many interisland flights in Greece fall under the 300-mile threshold, costing just 3,000 Skywards miles each way in economy.

Fly within South Korea on Korean Air : Seoul's Gimpo International Airport (GMP) to Jeju International Airport (CJU) costs just 3,000 Skywards miles in economy one-way or 7,500 miles in business class each way, down from 25,000 miles in business on the old chart.

Lie-flat business class to Portugal from 67,500 miles : Flights from the East Coast to Lisbon's Humberto Delgado Airport (LIS) or Porto's Francisco Sá Carneiro Airport (OPO) require 67,500 miles each way; similar flights from the West Coast rise to 94,000 miles each way. The real value is in short European hops, with mainland Portugal-to-Madeira runs costing just 6,000 miles in economy or 15,000 miles in business class.

Unlock Latin America from 4,500 miles : Miami International Airport (MIA) to Tocumen International Airport (PTY) in Panama City costs 11,000 miles in economy one-way or 27,500 miles in business class each way. Panama City is a great place for a stopover , and Copa's extensive network for onward connections to Central American destinations under the 500-mile band is a great deal, as you can often find seats in economy class for just 4,500 miles.

Fly Gol Airlines within Brazil : Domestic Brazilian flights under 500 miles cost as little as 4,500 miles in economy, which is a terrific value in a country where domestic fares can be surprisingly steep.

Johannesburg to Cape Town from 8,000 miles : These awards saw some of the biggest drops, as Emirates previously used a pricier dedicated chart. The popular route from O. R. Tambo International Airport (JNB) in Johannesburg to Cape Town International Airport (CPT) costs 8,000 miles in economy one-way or 20,000 miles in business class each way.

Nonstop to Germany on Condor : Seasonal flights from several airports in the Northeast to Frankfurt Airport (FRA) cost 27,000 Skywards miles in economy or 67,500 miles in business class. One caveat: Condor is the only partner that saw some economy awards increase in price — by as much as 38% for longer routes — under the new chart.

Related: Why this airline you might not have heard of yet could be your best ticket to Europe

MATTEO COLOMBO/GETTY IMAGES

Qantas has its own dedicated Skywards award chart that was also recently overhauled. The revised rates are significantly better than the old chart. For example, Qantas business class from Sydney Airport (SYD) to Perth Airport (PER) in Australia dropped from a pricey 95,000 miles to 44,000 miles each way.

However, those Qantas-specific rates are still generally more expensive than booking the same flights through other programs. That same Sydney-to-Perth business-class seat costs 43,600 Qantas Frequent Flyer points when booked directly through Qantas or as few as 20,000 American Airlines AAdvantage miles.

Where Qantas awards through Skywards might make sense is if you already have Skywards miles sitting in your account and can't access other programs, but they're rarely the cheapest way to book a Qantas flight.

If you don't already have Skywards miles in your account or you want to top up your existing balance to make a savvy partner redemption, you can transfer points and miles from several major credit card programs.

Every major transferable currency except Chase Ultimate Rewards (which is no longer an Emirates partner) still offers transfers to Skywards, though many ratios have been reduced over the past year.

Bilt : 1:1 (1,000 Bilt Points equal 1,000 Skywards miles)

American Express Membership Rewards : 5:4 (1,000 Amex points equal 800 Skywards miles)

Citi ThankYou Rewards : 1,000:800 for premium cardholders (1,000:560 for nonpremium cardholders)

Capital One : 4:3 (1,000 Capital One miles equal 750 Skywards miles)

Marriott Bonvoy : 3:1, with a 5,000-mile bonus per 60,000 points transferred (60,000 Marriott points equal 25,000 Skywards miles)

The golden rule of points and miles transfers still applies: Never transfer credit card points and miles to an airline program without a specific redemption in mind, as transfers cannot be reversed.

Skywards miles expire on a fixed schedule (generally three years after they're earned). Earning or transferring points or miles doesn't reset the clock, so confirm award space before you make a transfer.

COPA AIRLINES

It would be easy to write off the Emirates Skywards loyalty program right now, especially if you have already transferred points or miles from partner programs to book a luxurious ride in Emirates' Airbus A380 first class . But with the recently overhauled partner award chart reducing redemption rates, there is still good value in this program for anyone willing to look beyond Emirates' own flights.

If you have some “orphaned” Skywards miles with no immediate use, now could be the time to consider a partner redemption instead.

Editorial disclaimer: Opinions expressed here are the author's alone, not those of any bank, credit card issuer, airline or hotel chain, and have not been reviewed, approved or otherwise endorsed by any of these entities.

{

FRONT PAGE

∞ The Dalrymple Report: CPR, Creator Apps, and Car locks

Jim Dalrymple · The Loop

Dave has been taking a CPR course, probably something we all should know how to do, and he tells us a few things he's learned. Apple this week expanded their services business by offering a new Creator Bundle for a monthly subscription. Dave also got the key for his car on his phone and watch, but the experience may not be what you expect it was.

Follow this podcast

Brought to you by :

CleanMyMac : Get Tidy Today! Try 7 days free and use my code DALRYMPLE for 20% off at clnmy.com/DALRYMPLE

Show Notes:

CPR certification

Apple tests real-world Car Key performance with major car makers

Eddie Cue on a record-breaking year for Apple services

Apple introduces new Creator Apps subscription

Apple officially talks Google Gemini deal

Shows and movies we're watching

Run Away, Netflix

Zoe Saldña

The Closer, Netflix

}

{

FEATURES

A plant-filled sanctuary among the skyscrapers: First look at 1 Hotel Tokyo

Eric Rosen · The Points Guy

Japan, Japan, Japan. It seems everyone you know has been to Japan in the last year, or has a trip planned soon.

And why not? The dollar is holding strong against the yen, making travel there affordable, and the country has a packed cultural calendar and the draws of gorgeous fall foliage, phenomenal skiing and, of course, those famous cherry blossoms in the spring.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

It's small wonder, then, that 1 Hotels — the rapidly expanding minichain of sustainability-minded luxury hotels — had its sights set on Tokyo as it continues to grow its international footprint.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

Finally, after years of planning, the 1 Hotel Tokyo just opened in March, and I was among the first guests to stroll its plant-filled halls and take a dip in its stunning indoor pool.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

“What we love about Tokyo is that it's a traditional city with a great energy to its roots and it's grounded in nature,” Raul Leal, the CEO of Starwood Hotels, told me over lunch during my recent visit. “Tokyo is one of the more dynamic cities in the world ... it's always been a target city for us.”

Here's what it's like staying at the new 1 Hotel Tokyo and everything that sets it apart from Tokyo's other luxury hotels.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

Pulling up to the new Akasaka Trust Tower, you'd be forgiven for thinking you'd arrived at merely another soaring office tower in one of the city's busy business districts. But a closer look reveals signature 1 Hotel branding — a giant “1” made from beams of salvaged wood, a backlit distressed-metal sign and a small reception area with carefully placed potted plants and Oya stone boulders that mirror those of the stonework of the nearby Imperial Palace's moat.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

A brisk elevator ride whisks you up to the hotel, which occupies floors 38-43 of the tower. Compared to the cocoon-like ground-floor reception, the 38th-floor lobby feels like a light-filled terrarium.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

Lush greenery abounds, the wooden ceiling beams evoke both the rake patterns of Japanese sand gardens and the roofs of local temples, while expansive white-cushioned sectionals and welcoming seating vignettes with fluffy chairs and leather sofas all look out toward Tokyo Tower and the city's skyline.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

Many are already likely to be occupied by creative types taking meetings with local colleagues, or curious Tokyoites stopping in for organic matcha and pastries at Neighbors Cafe.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

Settle in yourself; by the time the sun starts setting, a DJ will be spinning background tunes while folks sip specialty cocktails crafted from the many bottles on display at the cloud-shaped bar. Now that's a way to start a night out in Tokyo.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

Spanning just six floors, 1 Hotel Tokyo has 211 accommodations, including three penthouses and 24 suites. You'll find many 1 Hotel hallmarks inside, including plenty of timber accents, organic cotton bedding, in-room filtered water taps and glassware made from repurposed wine bottles, not to mention those fabulous hooded robes.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

There are plants galore, and beautifully arranged living wall panels with local flora.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

But this 1 Hotel also feels distinctly Japanese, with design elements that reference traditional ryokan, or inns, such as live-edge shiplap bed backs that call to mind traditional rural Japanese houses, woven carpets reminiscent of tatami mats and wavy wall art resembling handmade fish traps.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

Glassed-in bath-shower suites feel like your own individual onsen experience and come stocked with Bamford amenities plus my favorite cheeky touch: a little hourglass in the shower, should you feel the need to limit your water usage by trying to soap up and rinse off before the sands run out.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

My own 560-square-foot Panoramic Tower Studio Suite on the 41st floor offered fabulous views of Tokyo Tower and the surrounding neighborhood (and even a local shrine) from the window-side sectional. The floor space also made it easy to stretch out on the provided yoga mat and to work out the kinks from a day of sightseeing with the foam roller I found in the closet.

ERIC ROSEN/THE POINTS GUY

}

{

Families Bond through Multi-Gen Travel

Anne Gordon · Live Life Travel

LIVE LIFE TRAVEL, LLC

Whether we like to admit it or not, life just passes us by way too fast. Having recently lost my grandparents, I can tell you that I have never been more grateful for all the time that we spent together -and how much we loved traveling with them every summer. It is the time you spend together, and the memories you make, that makes life worth living.

Multi-generational travel has become very popular and with good reason. As families live further apart and lives are crazier than ever, it is important to carve out that time to have shared experiences, nurture family relationships and create those memories that will last a lifetime.

“For more than ten years I had the idea I wanted to send my parents back to Bermuda, where they had honeymooned in 1969, for their 50th Anniversary. When it came time to plan, we decided to tag along with them for this trip down memory lane.

Having three generations of our family together to share this experience made it so special. All of us being there with them and listening to all of their stories was magical, and it also gave my 7-year old daughter a chance to feel like she was part of their love story. Even though we all spend a lot of time together, this is not something that could have happened at home. The memories we made on this trip will last more than a lifetime – they’ll last for three lifetimes!”

We also had the opportunity to speak with Kelly Wyland, who explains that doing two big trips in one year is not the norm for her family, but when you have opportunities like this, you have to go for it. Kelly and her family traveled to Ireland as an extension of a work trip and to France as a school trip with her daughter.

Kelly: While in Ireland, we had the opportunity to experience part of our family’s history going back many generations. In Paris, it was all about sharing experiences and making new memories.

K: Honestly – me! I grew up with stories about my ancestors and Irish culture and have tried to teach my kids a little about that part of our family history. It was nice to have my mom to reminisce with, and my kids to learn with. We all have roots there and it was an unforgettable experience to step foot into the same country my ancestors left so many years ago. It’s something all of us will remember for the rest of our lives.

Live Life Travel, an independent affiliate of Travel Experts
Member of Virtuoso, Virtuoso Family, Culinary, Wellness
Virtuoso Saveur Advisory Board.

}

The post Families Bond through Multi-Gen Travel appeared first on Live Life Travel .

{

UPDATE: TSA to pay officers ‘immediately’ as airport security lines mount

Sean Cudahy · The Points Guy

The Transportation Security Administration has “immediately” begun the process of paying workers, the Trump administration said Friday afternoon — and TSA officers could see paychecks in their bank accounts as soon as Monday.

The move came as lawmakers on Capitol Hill remained deadlocked on legislation to fully reopen the government, and as travelers continued to face major backups at airport security checkpoints.

TSA workers missed another paycheck on Friday as the shutdown of the U. S. Department of Homeland Security approached the six-week mark.

Officer call-outs have surged in recent weeks, leading to the highest wait times in the TSA’s nearly 25-year history, the agency’s top leader told Congress this week.

At Houston’s George Bush Intercontinental Airport (IAH), the de facto epicenter of the recent travel chaos, backups stretched up to three and a half hours Friday.

Elsewhere, Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport (BWI) advised passengers to arrive at the terminal three hours before departure amid the spring break rush.

There had been momentum on Capitol Hill toward ending the partial government shutdown, which began on Feb. 14.

Early Friday, the U. S. Senate broke a weekslong stalemate and voted to fund most of the DHS, including the TSA. But the measure appeared to face an uphill climb in the House.

President Donald Trump on Friday afternoon said he had ordered DHS to “immediately pay” workers, saying air travel had reached a “breaking point.”

Airlines and leaders across the travel sector had praised the move when Trump first announced the plans Thursday evening.

A security line reaches outside the terminal this week at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport (ATL). MEGAN VARNER/GETTY IMAGES

In a statement to TPG Friday afternoon, a DHS spokesperson confirmed the department had already begun the process of paying its workforce.

Still uncertain, though, is how quickly airport security checkpoints could return to normal wait times.

One reason for optimism: After last fall’s larger federal shutdown finally ended after 43 days, call-outs among air traffic controllers immediately lessened — and flight operations rapidly improved.

Will TSA operations snap back to normal in the same way?

Travelers, airlines and lawmakers alike can hope. However, it’s important to keep in mind that TSA officers have now endured not one — but two — 40-plus-day shutdowns since October, going without paychecks during both stretches.

So it’s certainly possible it could take some time for TSA checkpoint operations to return fully to pre-shutdown wait times.

Travelers wait in a security line at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport (ATL). MEGAN VARNER/GETTY IMAGES

For now, if you’re headed to the airport this weekend — especially Friday or Sunday — I’d continue to prepare for longer lines than normal. Here’s a rundown of my top tips for getting through security during this unpredictable stretch .

Airlines issue travel waivers

As of late Thursday night, Delta Air Lines had flexible travel waivers in place for customers at ATL and New York’s John F. Kennedy International Airport (JFK). United Airlines had done the same for its IAH hub .

And, as TPG reported earlier this week, budget carrier Allegiant Air had granted customers significant flexibility to change their tickets during the shutdown.

TSA app remains unreliable

Also, keep in mind that the TSA’s app, which typically shows live checkpoint wait times, will likely remain unreliable, since it’s not updated regularly during a federal shutdown.

Your best bet before heading to the airport: Continue checking your airport’s website and social media feeds to see whether it offers a wait-time tracker of its own.

Even beyond this federal shutdown — which, by the way, still technically isn’t over — longer-term concerns remain at airports. Already, some 480 TSA officers have left their jobs since this latest partial federal shutdown began, acting TSA Administrator Ha Nguyen McNeill testified this week on Capitol Hill.

And considering it takes months to train new hires, she noted this could pose a major problem ahead of one of the century’s biggest sporting events in the U. S. this summer.

“This is a dire situation,” McNeill said. “We are facing a potential perfect storm of severe staffing shortages and an influx of millions of passengers at our airports for the World Cup games in less than 80 days.”

This is a developing story. Check back for further updates.

Related reading:

}

{

White Bean Soup with Garlic and Olive Oil

Heidi Swanson · 101 Cookbooks

The framework for this white bean soup comes from a wonderful recipe in Casa Moro , the second cookbook in the Moro cookbook series. Over the years, I've drifted on the ratio of ingredients quite a bit – heavier on the beans, lighter on the fennel, more casual with the saffron. I've also come to love finishing the soup with a few toppings I never skip (or skimp on): a squeeze of fresh orange or tangerine juice, crumbled feta, and lots of chopped olives. The saffron-tinted broth is silky and beautiful, and the soup itself is rustic, filling and exactly the way I like to eat.

White Bean Soup: Canned vs. Dried?

Let's talk about how I like to pull this soup together, starting with the beans. Many white bean soup recipes call for canned beans but I always cook this soup using dried beans for a couple of reasons. First, they maintain shape and structure well, instead of going to mush in the pot during the simmer. Second, cooking beans from dried gives you both plump flavorful beans and the rich broth that comes along with them. That broth is the stealth secret ingredient here – when you change it to something different (water, a different broth, etc.) it changes the foundation of the soup.

What To Serve With White Bean Soup

There are a lot of ways to make this soup even more of a meal. Here are a few ideas:

Put an egg on it : More times than not I top this soup with a spoon-fried egg (pictured), or a poached egg. You get the added protein and extra staying power.

Side Salad : Soup and salad is a classic combination for a reason. I love this cilantro salad alongside this soup, or something like this easy kale salad . Or, just poke around the salad recipes to find other ideas.

Artichokes : If you see baby artichokes when you're shopping for the fennel called for in this recipe, grab them and cook them in olive oil until they're nice and brown and caramelized. I wrote this post about how to cook artichokes if you need a bit more instruction. Make a big platter full!

Good Bread : thick slabs, well toasted, preferably rubbed with a peeled clove of garlic.

Variations:

I love the combination of caramelized fennel, saffron, and a squeeze of citrus in this soup, but you can certainly take it in other directions. For example, in place of the saffron, you could try a favorite curry powder. Just keep in mind that part of what makes this soup special is the subtle way the flavors meld together – they form a somewhat subtle, harmonious chorus. Stronger spices will bring something different entirely. Still good, but different.

Can I Freeze This Soup?

Yes! This soup freezes like a dream. Allow it to cool completely. Transfer to a freezer-safe container or bag, and freeze in portions. To reheat, I usually let the soup thaw a bit. Put a small amount of water in the bottom of a soup pan, transfer the block of frozen soup to the pan, cover, and heat over medium for a while. Stir now and then.

Farro & Bean Soup

Dried Fava Bean Soup with Mint and Chiles

White Bean Soup with Pesto Herb Dumplings

Chipotle Cinnamon Slow-Cooked Coconut Beans

Persian New Year Noodle Soup (Ash Reshteh)

all soup recipes

Continue reading White Bean Soup with Garlic and Olive Oil on 101 Cookbooks standard-article(title: [Spring Tortellini Soup with Pistachio Pesto.], author: [Jessica], source-name: [How Sweet Eats], images: (), paragraphs: ([This spring vegetable tortellini soup is cozy, comforting and refreshing all at the same time. This light soup is made with a rich parmesan broth, loaded with spring vegetables like asparagus and leeks and finished off with pistachio pesto. Delicious!], [We're bringing a vibrant bowl of green into the first week of spring!], [This spring tortellini soup is absolutely packed with vegetables, like carrots, leeks, asparagus and peas, then finished off with some cheese tortellini. The broth is rich and laced with parmesan and the kicker? A spoonful of pistachio pesto that really takes it over the top.], [It's an easy soup that is secretly special!], [It's not JUST veggies with cheese tortellini, you know? It has a little something extra that makes it satisfying, beautiful and tasty.], [Just the kind of recipe we need!], [If you thought I was done with soup for the season... oops, I am not. I wish that I was but we keep getting spring cold snaps, which means I keep experimenting with different varieties of warm foods. Comfort foods. Hugs in a bowl! And all that jazz.], [I've shared a spring minestrone soup before which is fairly similar, but that one is made in a slow cooker. This one is just made on your stovetop because honestly, I can't even be bothered to bring out my slow cooker right now unless I'm making something like pulled pork or heating up a big batch of meatballs or chili. I'm still in soup mode, but out of slow cooker mode. You get me!], [I also use this soup as a way to repurpose my pistachio pesto. That pesto is so springy and delicious, and I love adding pesto in soups to give it some extra oomph. It's such a perfect way to bring more flavor to the broth and give it a little extra something. If you use that pesto to make my salmon parchment packets and have some left over, this is exactly how you can use it up. Different, but complementary!], [I usually make this when I have extra pesto , but I'm including the pesto recipe below too so if you want to make it fresh with the soup, you can. (more...)], [The post standard-article(title: [∞ The Dalrymple Report: Shoveling snow with Siri, More on Apple's Future AI], author: [Jim Dalrymple], source-name: [The Loop], images: (), paragraphs: ([We all know Siri can be frustrating, but Dave has a story about shoveling snow and trying to use Siri at the same time that had me laughing. I probably should feel bad about it, but it was just too good. More news from Mark Gurman this week on Apple's plans to run their AI efforts using Google's Gemini.], [Follow this podcast], [Brought to you by :], [Copilot Money : For a limited-time, when you sign up at copilot.money (new users only, web only) you can get two months free with code DALRYMPLE. Start the new year with clarity. Your money, beautifully organized, now across every device.], [Show Notes:], [Apple reportedly replacing Siri interface with actual chatbot experience for iOS 27], [Gurman on Apple's AI], [Sebastian de With joins design team at Apple], [Apple introduces new AirTag with expanded range and improved findability], [Apple's 'Creator Studio' App Bundle Now Available for $12.99 Per Month], [Apple Updates Keynote, Numbers, and Pages Apps With New Free and Paid Features], [Should you update to the new Pages, Numbers, Keynote, and Freeform on Mac?], [Search Your Apple Account Purchase History on iPhone], [Apple turning to Intel for future iPhone chips, analyst reaffirms], [Shows and movies we're watching], [Prime Target, Apple TV], [Springsteen: Deliver Me from Nowhere, Disney+],), insert-map: (:), word-count: 213, edited-for-length: false, debug-mode: false,) brief-group((brief-item([Jay Bennett], source-name: [Science News], [Found in an ultrafaint dwarf galaxy, the ancient star's unusual chemistry indicates it formed from gas enriched by a single early supernova.]) brief-item([Jake Buehler], source-name: [Science News], [Fossil jaw remains found in Egypt suggest that the earliest modern apes evolved in North Africa, not in East Africa where most fossils have been found.]) brief-item([Inaara Thawer], source-name: [Inhabitat], [Kaiserstraße is a new residential building currently under construction in Blumenau, Brazil. The project is designed by Alencar Arquitetura and aims to harness connections between residents and the natural world.]) brief-item([Martin J. Kernan], source-name: [Science News], [A team of scientists re-created the way Neandertals made birch tar and found its antibacterial properties could fight off skin infections.]) brief-item([Bonface Landi], source-name: [Inhabitat], [Buying a property isn't just about securing finance and finding the right home—it also comes with tax implications that can affect you both immediately and in the long run. Many buyers focus on deposits and loan approvals, but overlooking tax considerations can lead to missed opportunities for savings or unexpected costs down the track.

}

Understanding these basics can help you avoid financial missteps and make smarter decisions with your purchase.

Stamp Duty: The Upfront Cost Buyers Can't...])

brief-item([Andrea Lius], source-name: [Science News], [Sure, playing video game is fun. But the ability of tiny brain organoids to pick up a skill could provide insight into how healthy brains work.]) brief-item([Bonface Landi], source-name: [Inhabitat], [Solar panels are by far the best applicable technology for converting solar energy to usable electricity today. With the sun available to us around the year, it is only reasonable to consider taping its energy for domestic use. Even so, the currently available photovoltaic solar cell technology is still not as efficient as desired. The cells used in most solar panels have an efficiency of about 15% to 20%. This means that only about 20% of the sun rays that reach the panel are converted to electricity.))

Spring Tortellini Soup with Pistachio Pesto. appeared first on How Sweet Eats .],), insert-map: (:), word-count: 384, edited-for-length: false, debug-mode: false,)

You get me! I also use this soup as a way to repurpose my pistachio pesto.

Jessica

standard-article(title: [∞ The Dalrymple Report: Wow, Apple hardware!], author: [Jim Dalrymple], source-name: [The Loop], images: (), paragraphs: ([This show is all about the hardware Apple released this week and what a week it was. MacBook Pro, MacBook Air, MacBook Neo, iPhone 17e, Studio Display, iPad Air, and the M5 Pro and M5 Max chips. A crazy week for Apple’s hardware team.], [Follow this podcast], [Brought to you by:], [Squarespace : Check out squarespace.com/DALRYMPLE for a free trial, and when you’re ready to launch, use OFFER CODE: DALRYMPLE to save 10% off your first purchase of a website or domain.], [Show Notes:], [Apple accelerates U. S. manufacturing with Mac mini production], [Apple unveils new Studio Display and all-new Studio Display XDR], [New Apple Studio Display and Studio Display XDR Don’t Work With Intel Macs], [Apple introduces iPhone 17e], [Side-by-side of the 16, 17, 17e], [Difference between 17e and 17], [Apple introduces the new iPad Air, powered by M4], [Apple introduces MacBook Pro with all-new M5 Pro and M5 Max], [With the latest chips, the MacBook Pro now maxes out at $7,349], [Apple debuts M5 Pro and M5 Max], [Apple introduces the new MacBook Air with M5], [Say hello to MacBook Neo], [Intro video for the MacBook Neo], [MacBook Neo vs. MacBook Air], [20+ MacBook Neo Compromises], [MacBook Neo Features Two Different USB-C Ports], [Shows and movies we’re watching], [Vanished, MGM+], [HBO Max and Paramount+ to merge], [Big Bang Theory, HBO],), insert-map: (:), word-count: 222, edited-for-length: false, debug-mode: false,) standard-article(title: [Asparagus Ribbon Salad with Crispy Chickpeas and Hot Honey], author: [Heidi Swanson], source-name: [101 Cookbooks], images: (), paragraphs: ([This asparagus ribbon salad is all about contrasts. You have silky ribbons of asparagus piled with crispy chickpeas, toasted almonds and coconut, and snappy bites of apple. A vibrant lemon olive oil dressing pulls everything together, and a drizzle of hot honey softens the lemony edge. It’s a bit of a springtime weirdo, but in a really good way.], [If you’ve never shaved asparagus into ribbons, I encourage you to give it a try. The resulting tangles of asparagus are delicate, tender, and wonderful . They absorb dressing nicely, and welcome all sorts of crunchy, contrast ingredients you might have around – nuts, seeds, fried shallots, etc. That’s (basically) how we ended up with today’s recipe.], [How To Make Asparagus Ribbons], [Shaving raw asparagus into delicate ribbons is my favorite way to enjoy uncooked asparagus. The ribbons are delicate, becoming instantly tender when tossed with a simple lemon oil. The key here is using a Y-shaped vegetable peeler. Beyond that, a few tips:], [Buy medium-thick asparagus, thin asparagus is hard to peel into ribbons.], [Wash asparagus and snap off the thick woody ends.], [Start peeling your ribbons just below the tip of the asparagus. Rotate if needed to get as many ribbons as possible per spear. I usually have a bit left, the part that is too hard to get to with the peeler. Slice that piece (and the tip) into thin strips. Pictured below.], [Place the crunchy toppings on your salad at the last minute so they retain their crispness. Enjoy! -h], [Continue reading Asparagus Ribbon Salad with Crispy Chickpeas and Hot Honey on 101 Cookbooks],), insert-map: (:), word-count: 288, edited-for-length: false, debug-mode: false,)

The ribbons are delicate, becoming instantly tender when tossed with a simple lemon oil.

Heidi Swanson

{
∞ The Dalrymple Report: Tim Cook, Siri, iPhone Pocket

Jim Dalrymple · The Loop

The Dalrymple Report: Tim Cook, Siri, iPhone Pocket

There are rumors that Tim Cook is getting ready to retire from Apple as early as next year. Many think the link was intentional to test the market to see what it thinks before making anything official. In Japan, users can replace Siri on their iPhones, something people in most countries would love to do. Apple's newest product, the iPhone Pocket seems to be a success.

Follow this podcast

Brought to you by :

Notion Agent : Go to <https://notion.com/tdr> to try your new AI teammate, Notion Agent, today.

Surfshark VPN : Go to <https://surfshark.com/dalrymple> or use code dalrymple at checkout to get 4 extra months of Surfshark VPN!

Show Notes:

Best Chinese Food I've ever had in my life

Financial Times: 'Apple Intensifies Succession Planning for CEO Tim Cook'

Tim Cook retirement 'leak' is clearly a deliberate test of market reaction

Apple Podcasts unveils the most popular shows and trends of 2025

iOS 26.2 Lets iPhone Users in Japan Replace Siri With Third-Party Assistants on Side Button

Apple introduces iPhone Pocket

Shows and movies we're watching

The Nest, AMC+

Clive Davis: the soundtrack of our lives, Netflix

Aka Charlie Sheen, Netflix

}

Quiet Tribune

Vol. 1, No. 010 · 2026-03-30

Curated and composed automatically.